Donald,2013 I came across an old photo recently and pondered the people in it The person in the centre was my late brother Norman G Donald of the RAF The other figures in the photo I do not know though I suspect they were his flight instructors at North Battleford Canada The photo bears my brother's script KING PINS ALL N BATTLEFORD After qualifying as a pilot he sailed back to England and was posted to RAF Hunsdon just north of London in 1942 He was soon flying Douglas Havocs and Bristol Beaufighters Night fighters were a new school of defence but it was hopeless finding enemy aircraft in the dark The Turbinlite device was fitted to the Beaufighters and Havocs and the idea was to find the enemy somehow guided by ground control using heavy ground radar units too heavy to carry in aircraft turn on the Turbinlite searchlight and illuminate the enemy aircraft A single engined Hurricane fighter flying alongside then shot down the enemy aircraft It did help to see the target as this same sky was full of thousands of Allied aircraft all trying to avoid each other The Arthurian Annals Daniel P. Nastali,Phillip C. Boardman,2004 This is a definitive bibliography of over 600 years of the Arthurian tradition in English It is a chronological and descriptive listing of Arthurian literature and related material from the beginning of the English language to 2000 The Central and the Peripheral Jakub Lipski,Joanna Malicka,Paweł Schreiber,2014-09-26 Representing reality in terms of secure familiar centres and dangerous lesser known peripheries is one of the most elementary human cognitive instincts However we live in a world where this established division is becoming more and more problematic One person's periphery can be another's centre and many simple geographies of the world and of the mind clearly separating the known from the unknown have become obsolete How can one reconcile this complexity with the fact that human thinking cannot escape the centre periphery dichotomy How is it possible to find one's way in a world in which peripheries become centres and centres turn into peripheries The chapters of this book try to determine how the problem of centres and peripheries has been dealt with in the domains of literature and culture The contributors focus on different aspects of the issue from travel writing through attempts at mapping the self to finding central and peripheral territories in narrative itself
