

BLOODY TARAWA

The 2d Marine Division,
November 20-23, 1943

As 2dLt Jim Fawcett's tractor began the last lap, the twenty-four-year-old Washingtonian's gaze fixed upon the amtrac carrying 2dLt Mike Hofmann and elements of K Company's 2d Platoon, which was caught in a murderous crossfire as it bounced up onto the sand. Fawcett watched expectantly as Hofmann's rifleman vaulted to the sand and dropped to the beach. He began counting off leaping Marines hoping beyond hope to reach sixteen or better.

The count quickly climbed to eight, then stopped.

Fawcett peered more intently and thought he saw signs of life aboard the tractor. Then a familiar

Fawcett began a slow mental chant: "Get out, Mike! . . . Get out! . . . Get out!" With an eye on his own steady progress, Jim Fawcett prayed that the tractor in front of him would be emptied before the Japanese took yet more violent action. Then, in the instant before Fawcett's tractor hit the sandy shelf, Mike Hofmann's entire tractor disappeared in an immense cloud of smoke and steel splinters.
