

Paul Laurence Dunbar

- Life Story -

"With our client right we offer to take a comprehensive view of identity. Our horizon is the universe."

Early Life

Paul Laurence Dunbar was born on June 27, 1892, in Dayton, Ohio. His parents, Matilda and Joshua Dunbar, were slaves in Kentucky before the Civil War. His father escaped from slavery and fought in one of the first black units to serve in the war. His parents married in 1871, and he was born six months later. His father died in 1885 when Paul was just 12.

Dunbar started writing poems at the age of six and read his first poem publicly when he was nine. As a teenager, he attended Central High School in Dayton, where he was the only African-American student. He became friends there with future aviators Wilbur and Orville Wright. Paul was a popular student who was elected president of the school's literary society. He was also the editor of the school newspaper.

Personality & Characteristics

Dunbar was a creative, expressive, and dedicated man. He was well-liked and easy to get along with until his alcoholism and falling health took over in his later years. He was also known to be a reckless spender who was often in debt.

Life Story

When Dunbar was 18, he wrote and edited Dayton's first weekly African-American newspaper, The Tattler. The paper was printed by the Wright Brothers but only lasted for six weeks. He began working as an elevator operator in 1891. In 1893, his first collection of poetry, Oak and Ivy, was published by the United Brothers Publishing House. The Oak section was comprised of traditional verse poems, while the Ivy section contained poems written in African-American dialect. Dunbar invested his own money to publish the book and earned back his investment within two weeks by selling copies on his own. Many of these were sold to people who rode his elevator at work.
