Martial Arts, Health, and Society George Jennings,Lorenzo Pedrini,Xiujie Ma,2023-02-01 Arts Development in Community Health Mike White,2009 Arts in community health is a distinct area of activity that is characterised by the use of participatory arts to promote health Based on the latest international research this book considers how and why arts in community health has come about the characteristics of its practice and the challenges it poses for evaluation The rapid growth of this field of work in the UK from the mid 1990s has begun to impact on policy in the arts funding system on multi sector partnerships for health service delivery and in local authority cultural strategies yet the reasons for its emergence and the nature and diversity of the practice itself have gone largely unaccounted for It encompasses work in primary care community health and public health Arts in community health has not evolved simply as a result of the successful advocacy of an arts sector keen to demonstrate its relevance to health but rather through the wider recognition of a phenomenological connection between engagement in cultural activity and well being The pioneering viewpoints in this book promote an holistic approach to arts and public health focusing on the development of the person and not just the sick or dysfunctional

part of that person. Alongside the therapeutic benefits to patients, the book also considers environmental improvements to support staff and using the arts to produce more creative kinds of health information. This fully referenced guide compares and contrasts the arts in different cultures and healthcare systems, how well it works, why it works, and the factors that determine its success. The case studies examined prove shared creativity aids public health and simultaneously identifies and addresses the local and specific health needs in a community. In the last decade, health has become a recurrent topic in discussion of the role of the arts in society, fuelled by a growing body of research into connections between culture and well-being. This pioneering practice of arts in community health began in the UK in the late 1980s through sporadic pilot projects placing local arts development in health promotion and primary care contexts. It has since grown and expanded to embrace community health on a broad front, hooking up with multi-agency initiatives to address the social determinants of health through partnership working. Arts Based Health Care Research: A Multidisciplinary Perspective Kathryn Hinsliff-Smith, Julie McGarry, Parveen Ali, 2022-08-08. This book, written by academics across a range of disciplines including healthcare and social sciences, discusses the increasing use of the arts in healthcare research, which often stems from the recognition that for some topics of investigation or when dealing with sensitive issues, the usual qualitative or quantitative paradigms are not appropriate. While there is undoubtedly a place for such approaches, arts-based research paradigms offer not only additional study and data collection tools but also provide a new and enjoyable experience for those involved. The use of the arts as a medium to improve health and wellbeing was well documented by the World Health Organisation (WHO) in 2019 with over 3 000 studies conducted around the globe on the value of the arts in the prevention of ill health and promotion of health across the life span. This book examines how the arts in a variety of forms can be used by those working directly in healthcare settings as well as those involved in research across all health or patient settings. Covering a range of ABR genres including literature such as narrative and poetic inquiry, performance, music, dance, play, building, visual arts, drawing and painting, collage, installation art, comics, and audio-visual and multimethod approaches, this user-friendly book will appeal to nurses, researchers in nursing and allied healthcare professions, as well as professionals in the social sciences, psychosociology, psychology, literature, and arts. Official Gazette of the United States Patent and Trademark Office, 2003

Through Art We Care Wouter Bouchez, 2019-03-04. What happens when art meets health care? This book takes a closer look at the work of professional artists engaging in a dialogue with healthcare facilities. Although their artistic trajectories are very different, we can discover a common ground in those artists' interests and approaches, as well as in how the patients, the caregivers, and the artists themselves experience their presence in this healthcare context. They are connected by a focus on caring rather than curing. Human relations and connections are essential to the work of many contemporary artists, and they bring this focus with them when entering a healthcare setting or working with people.
