Art Of The Prima Donna:

The art of the prima donna and concert singer Frederick Herman Martens, 1977 The Art of the Prima Donna Joan Sutherland, 1998 The Art of the Prima Donna and Concert Singer Frederick H. Martens, 2001-01-01 The Arts of the Prima Donna in the Long Nineteenth Century Rachel Cowgill, Hilary Poriss, 2012-06-01

Female characters assumed increasing prominence in the narratives of nineteenth and early twentieth century opera. And for contemporary audiences many of these characters and the celebrated women who played them still define opera at its finest and most searingly affective even if storylines leave them swooning and faded by the end of the drama. The presence and representation of women in opera has been addressed in a range of recent studies that offer valuable insights into the operatic stage as cultural space focusing a critical lens at the text and the position and signification of female characters. Moving that lens onto the historical The Arts of the Prima Donna in the Long Nineteenth Century sheds light on the singers who created and inhabited these roles: the flesh and blood women who embodied these fabled doomed women onstage before an audience. Editors Rachel Cowgill and Hilary Poriss lead a cast of renowned contributors in an impressive display of current approaches to the lives, careers and performances of female opera singers. Essential theoretical perspectives reflect several broad themes woven through the volume: cultures of celebrity surrounding the female singer; the emergence of the quasi-mythical figure of the diva; explorations of the intricate and sundry arts associated with the prima donna and with her representation in other media; and the diversity and complexity of contemporary responses to her. The prima donna influenced compositional practices, determined musical and dramatic interpretation and affected management decisions about the running of the opera house: content of the season and employment of other artists. A clear demonstration that her position as first woman extended well beyond the boards of the operatic stage itself, The Arts of the Prima Donna in the Long Nineteenth Century is an important addition to the collections of students and researchers in opera studies, nineteenth century music performance and gender sexuality studies and cultural studies as well as to the shelves of opera singers and enthusiasts.

Opera, that most extravagant of the performing arts, is infused with the contexts of power brokering and cultural display in which it was conceived and experienced. For individual operas such contexts have shifted over time.

Fair Margaret and The Primadonna Francis Marion Crawford, Sir Henry Rider Haggard, 1905-01-01 I am a realist said Mr Edmund Lushington as if that explained everything We could hardly expect to agree he added It sounded very much as if he had said As you are not a realist my poor young lady I can of course hardly expect you to know anything Margaret Donne looked at him quietly and smiled She was not very sensitive to other people's opinions few idealists are for they generally think more of their ideas than of themselves Mr Lushington had said that he could not agree with her that was all and she was quite indifferent She had known that he would not share her opinion when the discussion had begun for he never did and she was glad of it She also knew that her smile irritated him for he did not resemble her in the very least He was slightly aggressive as shy persons often are and yet like a good many men who profess realism brutal frankness and a sweeping disbelief of everything not scientifically true Mr Lushington was almost morbidly sensitive to the opinion of others Criticism hurt him indifference wounded him to the quick ridicule made him writhe He was a fair man with a healthy skin and his eyes were blue but they had a particularly disagreeable trick of looking at one suddenly for an instant with a little pinching of the lids and a slight glitter turning away again in a displeased way as if he had expected to be insulted and was sure that the speaker was slighting him at the very least He often blushed when he said something sharp He wished he were dark because dark men could say biting things without blushing and pale because he felt that it was not interesting to be pink and white His hair too was smoother and softer than he could have wished it He had tried experiments with his beard and moustache and had finally made up his mind to let both grow but he still looked hopelessly neat When he pushed his hair back from his forehead with a devastating gesture it simply became untidy as if he had forgotten to brush it At last he had accepted his fate and he resigned himself to what he considered his physical disadvantages but no one would ever know how he had studied the photographs of the big men in the front of things trying to detect in them some single feature to which his own bore a faint resemblance Hitherto he had failed Yet he was somebody and perhaps it means more to be somebody nowadays in the howling fight for place and acknowledgment than it meant in the latter part of the nineteenth century How easy life was in the early eighties compared with this how mild were the ways of nations how primitive pure and upright the dealings of financiers in that day of pristine virtue and pastoral simplicity It was all very well to be an idealist then Mr Lushington sometimes said to Margaret the world was young then there was time for everything then there was room for everybody then even the seasons were different then At least all old people say so and it can hardly be supposed that all persons over fifty years of age belong to a secret and powerful association of liars organised and banded together to deceive the young Mr Lushington was somebody even at the beginning of this truthful little tale and that was some time ago and if anything about him could have really irritated Margaret Donne it was that she could not understand the reason of his undeniable importance The people who succeed in life and in the arts and professions are not always the pleasantest people nor even the nicest Miss Donne had found this out before she was twenty and she was two years older now She had learned a good many other things more or less connected with human nature and more or less useful to a young woman in her position
