Black and Blue James L. Gibson, Michael J. Nelson, 2018 The American legal system is experiencing a period of extreme stress if not crisis as it seems to be losing its legitimacy with at least some segments of its constituency Nowhere is this legitimacy deficit more apparent than in a portion of the African American community in the U S as incidents of police killing black suspects whether legally justified or not have become almost routine However this legitimacy deficit has largely been documented through anecdotal evidence and a steady drumbeat of journalistic reports not rigorous scientific research This book offers an all inclusive account of how and why African Americans differ in their willingness to ascribe legitimacy to legal institutions as well as in their willingness to accept the policy decisions those institutions promulgate Based on two nationally representative samples of African Americans this book ties together four dominant theories of public opinion Legitimacy Theory Social Identity Theory theories of adulthood political socialization and learning through experience and information processing theories The findings reveal a gaping chasm in legal legitimacy between black and white Americans More importantly black people themselves differ in their perceptions of legal legitimacy Group identities and experiences with legal authorities play a crucial role in shaping whether and how black people extend legitimacy to the legal institutions that so much affect them This book is one of the most comprehensive analyses produced to date of legal legitimacy within the American black community with many surprising and counter intuitive results Rural Sanitation in the Health Service United States. Holding the Blue Line in Australia Virginia Small,2025-09-26 This book examines the portrayal of contemporary policing in New South Wales Australia by mainstream media and how its sourcing of social media influences public opinion The observable and measurable consequences of this intermingling of news content with viewpoints is that mainstream media in tandem with social media influence political leaders to respond and pivot readily towards platformed views with either quick reactions through policymaking and new or revised legislation or arbitrarily letting matters slide The phenomenon is analysed through specific case studies in the book and the complications for police media and crisis management are identified This extensive research has relevance for policing globally because mainstream media relies heavily on social media content that is instantaneous global curated and reliant on marketable and readily understood narratives The book analyses the selective process by which actors in mainstream media construct news relying on prior framing narratives and perpetuating the received opinion of social media as if it represents general belief Media framing disrupts and interrupts public understandings of the role of policing and perpetuates misunderstanding in the public arena of the institutional values and legislated responsibilities of a police force In addition strategies employed by social media activists to frame and re contextualise crisis events impact on police law enforcement operations and can hamper police capacity to respond to protect public safety Scientific Research and Development in Colleges and Universities
