Women in Chemistry Marelene F. Rayner-Canham, Geoffrey Rayner-Canham, 1998 Though rarely noted women have been active participants in the chemical sciences since the beginning of recorded history This thought provoking book brings to life the many talented women who besides the universally respected Marie Curie made significant contributions to chemistry The Rayner Canhams examine the forces that have defined women s roles in the progress of chemistry observing that many were thwarted from capitalizing on their achievements by the prejudices of their time Their book discusses women chemists from as far past as the Babylonian civilization but focuses on professional women chemists from the mid 19th century when women gained access to higher education Read this book and learn about the chemist assistants of the French salons about independent researchers in the 19th century about the three disciplinary havens for women in the 20th century about how war helped bring women into the chemical industry and much more

From Classical to Modern Chemistry Peter J. T. Morris, Peter John Turnbull Morris, Royal Society of Chemistry (Great Britain), 2002 Most chemists today have either taken part in or been affected by the chemical revolution that has taken place over the course of the last century Developments in instrumentation have changed not just what chemists do but also how they think about chemistry New and exciting areas of previously inaccessible research have been opened up as a direct result of this revolution This is the first book to examine this instrumental revolution and goes on to assess the impact on chemical practice in areas ranging from organic chemistry and biochemistry to environmental analysis and process control thus demonstrating how fundamental and extensive are the changes that have occurred With contributions from internationally recognised specialists this lavishly illustrated book provides a focal point for any historian of chemistry or chemist with an interest in this fascinating topic This book is published in association with the Science Museum London UK and the Chemical Heritage Foundation Philadelphia

Instrumentation Between Science, State and Industry B. Joerges, T. Shinn, 2012-12-06 In this book we appropriate their conception of research technology and extend it to many other phenomena which are less stable and less localized in time and space than the Zeeman Cotton situation In the following pages we use the concept for instances where research activities are orientated primarily toward technologies which facilitate both the production of scientific knowledge and the production of other goods In particular we use the term for instances where instruments and methods traverse numerous geographic and institutional boundaries that is fields distinctly different and distant from the instruments and methods initial focus We suggest that instruments such as the ultra centrifuge and the trajectories of the men who devise such artefacts diverge in an interesting way from other forms of artefacts and careers in science metrology and engineering with which students of science and technology are more familiar The instrument systems developed by research technologists strike us as especially general open ended and flexible When tailored effectively research technology instruments potentially fit into many niches and serve a host of unrelated applications Their multi functional character distinguishes them from many other devices which are designed to address specific narrowly defined problems in a circumscribed arena in and outside of science Research technology activities link universities industry public and private research or metrology establishments instrument making firms consulting companies the military and metrological agencies Research technology practitioners do not follow the career path of the traditional academic or engineering professional

Everybody Wins!

Gordon Cain, 2001 Everybody Wins is the inspiring unfamiliar picture of an individual launching a wholly new career not once but twice when most are ready to retire. In his 70s Gordon Cain, a chemical engineer by trade, acquired and restructured several chemical companies, effecting a turnaround in the commodity chemicals industry. An unprecedented visionary, Cain made millions for himself and his employees through the strategies of innovative management, employee stock ownership, and leveraged buyouts. In his 80s, he turned his interests to a new economy field, biotechnology. Within only six years, he transformed one company, Lexicon Genetics, from a university-based start-up to a public company worth over one billion dollars while masterminding two more biotech companies. The second edition talks about these recent ventures. As Cain recounts with modesty and humor how he made his way from chemical engineer to millionaire entrepreneur, we are reminded of how America's free market economy provides unparalleled opportunity and how good business deals can benefit everyone. In the process, this book illustrates how entrepreneurs continually reinvent themselves. Instrumentation for a Better Tomorrow, National Research Council, Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, Board on Physics and Astronomy, 2006-07-11. On November 15, 2004, the National Academies sponsored a symposium at the Beckman Center in honor of Arnold O. Beckman. The symposium concentrated on the wide-ranging practical applications of scientific instrumentation, as was the focus of much of Arnold Beckman's career. The report begins with two presentations: a remembrance by Arnold Beckman's daughter, Pat, and an overview of his life and accomplishments by Arnold Thackray, President of the Chemical Heritage Foundation. The next section contains presentations on the application of instrumentation in seven diverse areas: organic chemistry, molecular and systems biology, synchrotron x-ray sources, nanoscale chemistry, forensics, and clinical medicine. Finally, there is a summary of a panel discussion on the evolving relationship between instrumentation and research. Chemistry and Industry, 2001. Bridging Divides, Theodore L. Brown, 2010-10-01. Bridging Divides offers a first-hand account of the origins of the Beckman Institute for Advanced Science and Technology, an interdisciplinary research institute at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign devoted to leading-edge research in the physical sciences, computation, engineering, biology, behavior, cognition, and neuroscience. The book follows the progress of the Beckman Institute's creation from the initial conceptualization of a large multidisciplinary institute through proposal, formulation, to the architectural design and actual construction of its state-of-the-art building, made possible by the largest gift made to any public university at the time: a 40 million contribution from Illinois alumnus and founder of Beckman Instruments Inc., Arnold O. Beckman, and his wife, Mabel M. Beckman. Theodore L. Brown, the founding director of the Beckman Institute, brings an insider's personal perspective on its conception and its early operations. The evolution of a physical facility that matched a developing sense of what multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary research might be was a vital ingredient in the Institute's development. In addition, because the Institute represented a dramatic departure from traditional university organization, many challenges involving its administration and faculty had to be overcome. A celebration of the Beckman

Institute's first twenty years of operation since the building's completion in 1989 Bridging Divides provides an informative look back at the history of this groundbreaking interdisciplinary research center. The book also includes forewords by Stanley O Ikenberry, former president of the University of Illinois, and Richard H Herman, chancellor of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Luminaries of the Chemical Sciences, 2002 Orange Coast Magazine, 2002-06 Orange Coast Magazine is the oldest continuously published lifestyle magazine in the region, bringing together Orange County's most affluent coastal communities through smart, fun, and timely editorial content, as well as compelling photographs and design.
