Child Martyrs and Militant Evangelization in New Spain Stephanie Schmidt, 2025-04-08 Examines the many iterations of a story of child martyrdom in colonial Mexico A cornerstone of the evangelization of early New Spain was the conversion of Nahua boys especially the children of elites They were to be emissaries between Nahua society and foreign missionaries hastening the transmission of the gospel Under the tutelage of Franciscan friars the boys also learned to act with militant zeal They sermonized and smashed sacred objects Some went so far as to kill a Nahua religious leader For three boys from Tlaxcala the reprisals were just as deadly In Child Martyrs and Militant Evangelization in New Spain Stephanie Schmidt sheds light on a rare manuscript about Nahua child converts who were killed for acts of zealotry during the late 1520s This is the Nahuatl version of an account by an early missionary friar Toribio de Benavente Motolin a To this day Catholics venerate the slain boys as Christian martyrs who suffered for their piety Yet Franciscan accounts of the boys sacrifice were influenced by ulterior motives as the friars sought to deflect attention from their missteps in New Spain Illuminating Nahua perspectives on this story and period Schmidt leaves no doubt as to who drove this violence as she dramatically expands the knowledgebase available to students of colonial Latin America

Working Women in Mexico City Susie S. Porter,2003-11 The years from the Porfiriato to the post Revolutionary regimes were a time of rising industrialism in Mexico that dramatically affected the lives of workers Much of what we know about their experience is based on the histories of male workers now Susie Porter takes a new look at industrialization in Mexico that focuses on women wage earners across the work force from factory workers to street vendors Working Women in Mexico City offers a new look at this transitional era to reveal that industrialization in some ways more than revolution brought about changes in the daily lives of Mexican women Industrialization brought women into new jobs prompting new public discussion of the moral implications of their work Drawing on a wealth of material from petitions of working women to government factory inspection reports Porter shows how a shifting cultural understanding of working women informed labor relations social legislation government institutions and ultimately the construction of female citizenship At the beginning of this period women worked primarily in the female dominated cigarette and clothing factories which were thought of as conducive to protecting feminine morality but by 1930 they worked in a wide variety of industries Yet material conditions transformed more rapidly than cultural understandings of working women and although the nation's political climate changed much about women's experiences as industrial workers and street vendors remained the same As Porter shows by the close of this period women's responsibilities and rights of citizenship such as the right to work organize and participate in public debate were contingent upon class informed notions of female sexual morality and domesticity Although much scholarship has treated Mexican women's history little has focused on this critical phase of industrialization and even less on the circumstances of the tortilleras or market women By tracing the ways in which material conditions and public discourse about morality affected working women Porter's work sheds new light on their lives and poses important questions for understanding social stratification in Mexican history
