

Anthropology and Nursing

Introduction

Anthropology is the study of humans and human behavior and societies in the past and present. Deals with the origins, physical and cultural development, biological characteristics, and social customs and beliefs of humankind. In summary anthropology is science of humans and their works.

Leininger argued that anthropology and nursing were "two worlds to blend". The difference lies in this: anthropology is solely an academic discipline — a structured approach to the search for knowledge; nursing, however, is both a discipline and a human services profession. As a discipline, the latter's objective is to build a science of nursing — a systematic and rigorous structure of enquiry regarding the health related aspects of human interaction with the environment. But as a profession, nursing is a highly practical and well defined service role for delivering care to patients

Thus, because most teaching in a school of nursing is to clinicians, anthropological understandings must be "translated" by the anthropologist so they are relevant to patient care. The challenge in this translation process lies not only in discovering how to make concrete, practical suggestions out of abstract concepts, but also how to introduce anthropology as a scientific discourse within which such concepts form part of a system of ideas, methods, data, and rather unique ways at looking at the world so that practicing nurses can routinely use anthropological understandings in a disciplined rigorous way as they engage in their professional duties.

Similarities Between Nursing and Anthropology

Much of anthropology has been concerned with shared beliefs, values, and behavior. Similarly, nursing practice addresses normal growth and development, wellness promotion and health education. During illness, the concern of nursing is in the client's behavioral response, and in enhancing modification of patterns of daily living to promote a return to a normal lifestyle.

Anthropology And Nursing:

Anthropology and Nursing Pat Holden, Jenny Littlewood, 2015-07-03 Nursing has been described as the most natural female occupation of all embodying the so called feminine ideals of tenderness and caring Yet these ideals are juxtaposed with images of nurses as sex objects or as ruthlessly efficient harrieds How have these very different images been constructed And how do they relate to the reality of nursing the close contact with blood urine and faeces and the involvement with the rites of birth illness and death This book first published in 1991 explores the alternative ways different societies have developed to reconcile these contradictions Using contemporary historical and cross cultural case material the contributors trace the historical development of the role and investigate the expected qualities of nurses within different cultural settings such as India Uganda and Japan They look closely at the nurse as a social construct and demonstrate how the stereotypes relate to a particular society's notions of gender Designed primarily for anthropologists and sociologists interested in health illness and systems of health care this book challenges some of the myths of traditional nursing studies and provides an original perspective on doctor nurse patient relationships Anthropology of Nursing Karen Holland, 2019-09-09 This book aims to introduce nurses and other healthcare professionals to how anthropology can help them understand nursing as a profession and as a culture Drawing on key anthropological concepts the book facilitates the understanding and critical consideration of nursing practice as seen across a wide range of health care contexts and which impacts the delivery of appropriate care for service users Considering the fields in which nurses work the book argues that in order for nurses to optimize their roles as deliverers of patient care they must not only engage with the realities of the cultural world of the patient but also that of their own multi professional cultural environment The only book currently in the field on anthropology of nursing this book will be a valuable resource for nursing students at all academic levels especially where they can pursue specific modules in the subject as well as those other students pursuing medical anthropology courses As well as this it will be an essential text for those post graduate students who wish to consider alternative world views from anthropology and their application in nursing and healthcare in addition to their undertaking ethnographic research to explore nursing in all its fields of practice Nursing and Anthropology Madeleine M. Leininger, 1970 Transcultural Concepts in Nursing Care Margaret M. Andrews, Joyceen S. Cross-Cultural Nursing Janice M. Morse, 1989-12-01 Clinically Applied Anthropology N. Chrisman, T. Maretzki, 2012-12-06 like other collections of papers related to a single topic this volume arose out of problem sharing and problem solving discussions among some of the authors The two principal recurring issues were 1 the difficulties in translating anthropo logical knowledge so that our students could use it and 2 the difficulties of bringing existing medical anthropology literature to bear on this task As we talked to other anthropologists teaching in other parts of the country and in various health related schools we recognized that our problems were similar Similarities in our solutions led the Editors to believe that publication of our teaching experi ences and research relevant to teaching would help others and might begin the process of generating principles leading to a more coherent approach Our colleagues supported this idea and agreed to contribute What we agreed to write about was Clinically Applied Anthropology Much of what we were doing and certainly much of the relevant literature was applied anthropology And our target group was composed mostly of clinicians The utility of the term became apparent after 1979 when another set of anthropologists began to discuss ainical Anthropology They too recognized the range of novel be haviors available to anthropologists in the health science arena and chose to focus on the clinical use of anthropology We see this as an important endeavor but very different from what we are proposing
