cinq héros intrépides explorant des passages secrets des labyrinthes et des grottes pour finalement merger dans la lumière. Cette aventure incarne bien plus qu'une simple quête elle dévoile la symbolique profonde de la lumière en tant qu'archétype universel ancré dans notre inconscient collectif. À travers ce récit Enid Blyton offre une lecture subtile de la psychologie enfantine invitant un voyage initiatique riche en mystères et en révélations.

PROPOS DE L'AUTEUR Dès son enfance Michel Montebello s'est passionné pour la bande dessinée. Tintin, Astérix, Gotlib, Gaston Lagaffe, ainsi que pour la littérature jeunesse avec des auteurs tels qu'Enid Blyton, Jules Verne ou Hector Malot. Animé par le désir de renouer avec cet univers de l'enfance, il est devenu professeur des écoles. Fort de cette vocation, il a entrepris une analyse approfondie de la série Le Club des Cinq, sujet qu'il avait déjà exploré dans le cadre d'une maîtrise de lettres.

Sport, Education et Formation en Europe / Sport, Education and Training in Europe, 2015-06-09. Selon des études internationales, 30% des jeunes pratiquants entre 10 et 17 ans abandonnent le sport chaque année parce qu'ils considèrent que la pratique sportive leur prend trop de temps. Cette situation est d'autant plus vraie pour les sportifs de haut niveau dont le rythme de vie est difficilement conciliable avec les défis et contraintes du système éducatif et du marché du travail. Pour répondre à ce défi, la notion de double projet a vu le jour. Elle se définit comme la recherche de l'excellence sportive et de la réussite scolaire universitaire et professionnelle du sportif. Dans le cadre d'un projet pédagogique mené en collaboration avec le Master Spécialisé en Management des Organisations de Sport d'Audencia Nantes, le think tank Sport et Citoyenneté présente une approche comparative des systèmes mis en œuvre dans six États européens pour faciliter la poursuite du double projet, accompagnée de prestigieuses contributions. According to international research every year 30% of the young people between 10 and 17 who do sport give it up because they find their sport takes up too much of their time. This is especially the case for top level athletes it is difficult to reconcile the demands of their sporting life with the challenges and constraints of the education system or the job market. The idea of the dual career was devised as a response to this problem it can be defined as the pursuit of sporting excellence and academic or professional success by the athlete. Within the framework of an educational project in collaboration with the specialised Masters in Management of Sport Organisations at Audencia Nantes, Sport and Citizenship brings you a comparative approach to the systems set up with the aim of facilitating the dual career in sport and education in six European States and a compilation of important contributions.
