Harlem Renaissance two intellectual forces nationalism and Marxism clashed and changed the future of African American writing Current literary thinking says that writers with nationalist leanings wrote the most relevant fiction poetry and prose of the day Nationalism Marxism and African American Literature Between the Wars A New Pandora's Box challenges that notion It boldly proposes that such writers as A Philip Randolph Langston Hughes and Richard Wright who often saw the world in terms of class struggle did more to advance the anti racist politics of African American letters than writers such as Countee Cullen Jessie Redmon Fauset Alain Locke and Marcus Garvey who remained enmeshed in nationalist and racist discourse Evaluating the great impact of Marxism and nationalism on black authors from the Harlem Renaissance and the Depression era Anthony Dawahare argues that the spread of nationalist ideologies and movements between the world wars did guide legitimate political desires of black writers for a world without racism But the nationalist channels of political and cultural resistance did not address the capitalist foundation of modern racial discrimination During the period known as the Red Decade 1929 1941 black writers developed some of the sharpest critiques of the capitalist world and thus anticipated contemporary scholarship on the intellectual and political hazards of nationalism for the working class As it examines the progression of the Great Depression the book focuses on the shift of black writers to the Communist Left including analyses of the Communists position on the Negro Question the radical poetry of Langston Hughes and the writings of Richard Wright

Lessons and Legacies XV Erin McGlothlin, Avinoam Patt, 2024-05-15 The fifteenth volume in the Lessons Legacies series featuring multidisciplinary research in the Holocaust and Jewish cultural history on the theme of Global Perspectives and National Narratives The fourteen chapters included in this volume manifest three broad categories history literature and memory These chapters continue the recent trend in Holocaust Studies of a focus on local history integrating specific regional and national narratives into a more global approach to the event Newer studies have continued to incorporate what was once termed the periphery into a more global examination of the experiences of Jewish refugees in flight to Latin America Africa and the Soviet Union At the same time very specific local studies deepen our knowledge of the mechanics of genocide along with the experiences of refugees in flight and the subsequent dimensions of Holocaust memory and representation New research on Holocaust literature continues to unearth unexamined texts from the period of the war itself which can shed light on Jewish responses to persecution and strategies for survival The study of Holocaust testimonies continues to grapple with the challenge of language how to convey through the limits of human language the depths of barbarity to an audience that could never fully understand what they had not personally experienced Likewise literary studies continue to incorporate texts that were once considered outside the standard canon of Holocaust literature such as science fiction and children's literature The tension between local and global perspectives can also be seen quite clearly in what the volume's editors understand by the term memory studies or new approaches to research on museums and memorials. The very specific nature of collective memory on the national level continues to be the site of the contested politics of memory. A number of the chapters in this volume engage with the conflict of monuments and memorials, museums' attempts to resolve provenance issues, questions around the ethics of Holocaust tourism, and the inclusion of new technologies and digital survivors into the memorial landscape.

HOW THEY RUINED US Karen Kellock, 2018-12-12. Public school dumbing is astounding, and it's been three generations of this lunacy. They form an echo chamber with cronies, then justify violent destruction of enemies. In a social world where creativity's labeled lame when things go wrong, we take the blame. Managing stigma and false accusation takes up half the time of a creative person. The isolate on the narrow path feels guilt and shame, but the accepted one, no way.
