Working Memory and Thinking Kenneth Gilhooly, Robert H. Logie, 2004-08-02 Thinking and memory are inextricably linked However a divide and rule approach has led cognitive psychologists to study these two areas in relative isolation With contributions from some of the leading international researchers on working memory and thinking the present volume aims to break down the scientific divisions and foster scientific integration in the connections between these two core functions of cognition Broadly defined thinking comprises mentally driven change in current representations The processes involved in such change include application of logical rules heuristics problem solving strategies decision making planning and comprehension of complex material Memory involves the encoding retention and retrieval of information and the retention may be temporary or in a long term knowledge base Thinking cannot occur in a vacuum it relies on the long term memory base and a temporary mental workspace Despite the apparent limitations on mental workspace humans can drive a car and hold a conversation or store partial solutions while tackling other aspects of a problem So too some aspects of thinking are relatively resilient in the face of quite extensive brain damage yet other aspects are remarkably vulnerable to neuroanatomical insults Humans can solve complex problems with many alternative choice points and yet seem to be able to consider only a few hypotheses at any one time These apparent paradoxes present significant scientific challenges as to how humans can be such successful thinkers despite their very limited working memory The chapters herein represent a diversity of views as regards the nature of working memory and forms of human thinking The links between working memory and thinking are directly addressed and made explicit and in so doing this volume offers an increasingly integrated understanding of human thinking and memory

Masters of Destiny Josef Ransdall, 1932 The Pursuit of Excellence Through Education Michel Ferrari, 2001-12 Although specific definitions may change over time few goals are considered more important to education than the pursuit of academic excellence There are many different viewpoints on this issue today among educational psychologists and other social scientists One particularly glaring fault line in the debate divides those who emphasize developing individual learning and those who focus on promoting cultural and institutional reform These two perspectives are rarely addressed in a single volume In this book well known theorists and researchers present a range of perspectives on how to promote excellence in education This allows those who stress transformation of educational practice and those who emphasize individual abilities to speak to each and invites readers to jointly consider the arguments for both positions or for some synthesis of the two The point is to consider how these two divergent viewpoints can be reconciled or simply coordinated in an effort to benefit both students and society at large The main thesis is that excellence can be fostered without sacrificing equity both of which are fundamental tenets of a democratic education The issues addressed in this book have implications and relevance for school reform efforts and across the fields of educational psychology curriculum and instruction philosophy of education and educational leadership The volume provides a unique source for students and teachers in various disciplines who want to gain a broader and more integrated view of the nature and development of excellence through education

Trading Zones and Interactional Expertise Michael E. Gorman, 2010-11-19 A proposal for a new framework for fostering collaborations across disciplines addressing both theory and practical applications Cross disciplinary collaboration increasingly characterizes today's science and engineering research The problems and opportunities facing society do not come neatly sorted by discipline Difficulties arise when researchers from disciplines as different as engineering and the humanities work together and find that they speak largely different languages This book explores a new framework for fostering collaborations among existing disciplines and expertise communities The framework unites two ideas to emerge from recent work in STS trading zones in which scientific subcultures each with its own language develop the equivalents of pidgin and creole and interactional expertise in which experts learn to use the language of another research community in ways that are indistinguishable from expert practitioners of that community A trading zone can gradually become a new area of expertise facilitated by interactional expertise and involving negotiations over boundary objects objects represented in different ways by different participants The volume describes applications of the framework to service science business strategy environmental management education and practical ethics One detailed case study focuses on attempts to create trading zones that would help prevent marine bycatch another investigates trading zones formed to market the female condom to women in Africa another describes how humanists embedded in a nanotechnology laboratory gained interactional expertise resulting in improved research results for both humanists and nanoscientists Contributors Brad Allenby Donna T Chen Harry Collins Robert Evans Erik Fisher Peter Galison Michael E Gorman Lynn Isabella Lekelia D Jenkins Mary Ann Leeper Roop L Mahajan Matthew M Mehalik Ann E Mills Bolko von Oettinger Elizabeth Powell Mary V Rorty Jeff Shrager Jim Spohrer Patricia H Werhane
