Tmēma Archaïotētōn,2000 Seacliff Erosion and the Direction of Longshore Transport Along Portions of the Northern California Coast Laret Edith Savoy,1983 From Classical to Byzantine P. Nick Kardulias,2005 This book attempts to bring an anthropological perspective to the historical archaeology of a complex period in the Greek past Traditionally discussion of the transition from Late Antiquity to the Early

Byzantine period in the Aegean region has focused on the fate of Classical urban culture. Scholarly opinion is divided as to whether the Classical polis and its constituent institutions emerged intact from the disruptive events of the third to sixth centuries A.D. Over the past two decades a consensus has emerged that argues that the break between Classical and Byzantine occurred in the seventh not the fourth or fifth centuries A.D. and that it was a more gradual process than previously believed. The present study examines the Byzantine Fortress at Isthmia in the Peloponnese with an eye to understanding social change in this critical period at the level of the site and then the region in terms of an evolutionary perspective. This study focuses on three problems at different levels of abstraction: 1. A descriptive problem: gathering more information about the Medieval occupation at Isthmia, delineating the structural features of the Byzantine Fortress with the ultimate intent of comprehending site functions through time. 2. A methodological problem: the use of geophysical techniques to examine the subsurface of the Fortress and other selected spots to obtain the data necessary for proper description. 3. A broader historical problem: how best to reconstruct the key events pertaining to the transition from Late Antiquity to Early Byzantine. The methodological element becomes the link between the gathering of site specific data and the wider historical implications for that information.
