Bechuanaland Pioneers And Gunners

Timothy Joseph Stapleton

Bechuanaland Pioneers And Gunners:

The Bechuanaland Pioneers and Gunners Deborah Schmitt, 2006 Relying on extensive oral interviews with WWII veterans in Botswana Schmitt argues that British military policy during the Second World War directly impacted Bechuanaland's entry into the war the nature of the soldier's service and the lives of the individual soldiers Because Bechuanaland was considered a small rather unimportant backwater of colonial possessions policy decisions were often influenced by the political situation in South Africa and by its attitudes towards arming Africans Unwilling to cause friction with South Africa Great Britain mirrored that policy with the recruitment training and deployment of soldiers from Bechuanaland during the Second World War Once Great Britain realized that army recruitment strengths were below operational levels recruiting began in Bechuanaland for many different types of support roles including anti aircraft gunners medical transport drivers and pioneer duties Over 10 000 soldiers from this small British protectorate served under British command and contributed significantly to operational readiness and effectiveness during the war Relying on extensive oral interviews with WWII veterans in Botswana Schmitt argues that British military policy during the Second World War directly impacted Bechuanaland's entry into the war the nature of the soldier's service and the lives of the individual soldiers Because Bechuanaland was considered a small rather unimportant backwater of colonial possessions policy decisions were often influenced by the political situation in South Africa and by its attitudes towards arming Africans Unwilling to cause friction with South Africa Great Britain mirrored that policy with the recruitment training and deployment of soldiers from Bechuanaland during the Second World War However once Great Britain realized that army recruitment strengths were below operational levels recruiting began in Bechuanaland for many different types of support roles including anti aircraft gunners medical transport drivers and pioneer duties Over 10 000 soldiers from this small British protectorate served under British command and contributed significantly to operational readiness and effectiveness during the war Schmitt notes that African leaders were given quotas to fill based on population figures within the different provinces but it was stressed that enlistment was to be voluntary When African leaders had a difficult time meeting the demand some methods of coercion were used New recruits were enlisted trained and then shipped off to North Africa the Middle East and Europe to begin their assigned duties Interviews conducted with veterans highlight the nature of their service and the many challenges they faced with difficult weather discriminatory policies and as a result of being near the front lines of combat The soldiers of Bechuanaland adapted well to military life under the leadership of white officers Ten Thousand Men of Africa R. Alan R. Bent, 1952 Fighting for Britain David Killingray, 2012 Based mainly on oral evidence and soldiers letters tells the story of over half a million African troops who served with the British Army in campaigns in the Horn of Africa the Middle East Italy and Burma Looks at the impact of army life and travel on the men and their families and the role of ex servicemen in post war nationalist politics Special Bibliographic Series US Army Military History Research Collection, 1978 Special

Africans to noncombatant in white men's wars British military needs and policies changed over time with the changing fortunes of its empire In theory the British Regular Army was responsible for the defense of British strategic interests around the globe However Great Britain lacked the manpower to defend its possessions from foreign enemies As a result the British army heavily recruited colonial soldiers to augment its regiments during the Second World War Botswana soldiers were recruited into British auxiliary support units primarily as laborers and anti aircraft gunners They served in North Africa the Middle East and Italy throughout the war Britain's colonial ideology regarding African soldiers was patronizing and cloaked in self serving protectionism Africans were to be protected from corrupting influences and wider global conflicts The policy was unrealistic and difficult to implement as news of the Second World War spread Botswana leaders responded quickly to the declaration of war began recruiting campaigns and helped organize military training facilities However African soldiers had fewer opportunities for advancement within the British army and cases of racial discrimination abounded

Botswana, 1939-1945 Ashley Jackson, 1999 This is the first full study of an African country during the Second World War Unusually it provides both an Africanist and an imperial perspective Using extensive archival and oral evidence Ashley Jackson explores the social economic political agricultural and military history of Botswana He examines Botswana's military contribution to the war effort and the impact of the war on the African home front The book focuses on events and personalities on the ground in Africa and also on their interaction with and impact upon events and personalities in distant imperial centres such as Whitehall and the wartime British Army headquarters in the Middle East The attitudes aims and actions of all levels of colonial society British rulers African chiefs military officials ordinary African men and women are considered producing a total history of an African country at war

Reasonable Radicals and Citizenship in Botswana Richard P. Werbner, 2004 Richard Werbner assesses the role of the Kalanga minority in Botswana Since independence the Kalanga have dominated government and business yet their strong values and stable social order has allowed them to forge effective alliances with other ethnic groups and to contribute to significant social improvements
