Abstract: In his early years, Marx, inspired by Hegel, believed that history is a process of dynamic evolution. Therefore, he also paid attention to the replacement of social forms and the differences in social forms among different ethnic groups. While Hegel believed that the driving force of historical progress lies in "spirit," Marx focused more on the role of "material" in it. Thus, in his theories of social forms and world history, Marx emphasized the historical progress brought about by changes in the mode of production. Based on this, Marx expounded his views on the evolution of social forms and the development status and prospects of world history. He consistently held a "equality" political inclination and continued to pay attention to the oppression suffered by backward nations. This paper summarizes Marx's social form theory, world history theory, and his related discussions on backward nations in his historical philosophy. It outlines the global perspective from the internal social evolution of nations to the coordinated development of the world, and then to Marx's humanitarian care for backward nations.

Keywords: Marx's historical philosophy, social forms, world history, backward nations

1. Introduction

The question of how to interpret history has been a subject of diverse philosophical inquiries, encompassing debates on whether history is objective or subjective, whether it is subject to change, where the driving force of historical change originates, and what forms historical change takes. Marx inherited Hegel's notion that history is objective and subject to change. While there is little disagreement regarding Hegel's division of historical stages based on social forms, Marx differed in the criteria for such divisions, asserting from a materialistic standpoint that the driving force behind the evolution of social forms lies in the productive forces and relations of production. Building upon this foundation, Marx formulated his own historical philosophy, redefining different historical periods based on modes of production. Concurrently, Marx observed that the evolution of social forms in the capitalist era is no longer confined within the boundaries of individual nations or states. Instead, with the expansion of capitalism, different nations evolve collectively within the global context. Marx posited that human history would transition from the histories of different nations to world history. Within the backdrop of world history, the relationship between advanced and backward countries necessitates scrutiny, as Marx noted the oppressed status of backward nations within the international order, expressing concern over this issue. Thus, the theories of social forms, world history, and the

Basic Problems Of Marx's Philosophy:

Basic Problems of Marx's Philosophy Nathan Rotenstreich, 1965 Karl Marx Wood Allen, 2020-10-07 This is one of the most respected books on Marx's philosophical thought Wood explains Marx's views from a philosophical standpoint and defends Marx against common misunderstandings and criticisms of his views All the major philosophical topics in Marx's work are considered the central concept of alienation historical materialism and Marx's account of social classes the nature and social function of morality philosophical materialism and Marx's atheism and Marx's use of the Hegelian dialectical method and the Marxian theory of value The second edition has been revised to include a new chapter on capitalist exploitation and new suggestions for further reading Wood has also added a substantial new preface which looks at Marx's thought in light of the fall of the Soviet Union and our continued ambivalence towards capitalism exploring Marx's continuing relevance in the twenty first century Marxism and the Philosophy of Language V. Rubinstein,2013-12-19 First published in 2005 This book has two primary objectives The first is to show that there are substantial parallels between the work of Marx and Wittgenstein and the second is to apply a synthesis of these two thinkers to a variety of philosophical and theoretical disputes over the character of the social sciences The Classical Marxist Critiques of Religion: Marx, Engels, Lenin, Kautsky D.B. McKown,2012-12-06 In view of the enormous number of works on Marxism in general and in light of the many books and articles touching on the relationship of Marxism to religion in particular it may fairly be asked why yet another such work should be produced My reply is that in eliciting answers to the kinds of questions posed by the methodology I have used it was necessary to go to the primary sources almost exclusively This is not to bemoan a sad fate but to affirm that there are notable deficiencies in the secondary sources relevant to my topic By way of general indictment I contend that the major difficulty with existing studies of the Marxist critique of religion is that their authors whether expositors or critics have failed both to specify their own presuppositions concerning religion and to approach the subject with an adequate comprehension of its many dimensions Since in most cases the reader is equally unprepared anthropologically sociologically psychologically and historically for clear and informed thought in this vast and nebulous area the result has been widespread confusion As if this were not enough numerous writers with little more than polemical interests have compounded the confusion by failing to distinguish between religion in general and their own brands of faith in particular Others have not discriminated between the concepts of metaphysics and the supernatural items of religious belief

Routledge Library Editions: Gramsci Various Authors, 2022-07-30 In the years since the publication of the Prison Notebooks the interest and importance of Antonio Gramsci's contribution to Marxist thought and political analysis has become widely recognised The concern to explore and identify the structures of the capitalist state is both the principal characteristic of Gramsci's theoretical and political writings and also the inspiration for his writings on Italian history This set re issues four volumes by leading commentators on Gramsci's politics and philosophy which were originally published between 1979 and 1981

Praxis and Method (RLE: Gramsci) Richard Kilminster, 2014-04-24 This sociological critique of the philosophy of praxis looks at the importance of the concept in the social theory of leading influential Western Marxists such as Lukács Gramsci Korsch Horkheimer Marcuse and Adorno in the inter war period It offers a detailed critique of Marx and Hegel and explores the validity and implications for sociology of two of Marx's ideas which the later theorists made the centre piece of their social theory first that true theory is authenticated by praxis and second its corollary that certain major social transformations should and would in practice render sociology redundant

The Sociological Revolution Richard Kilminster, 2006-11-22 By controversially turning away from the current debates which surround social theory this book provides an historical analysis of the profound burden of sociology and its implications today

The Micro-macro Link Jeffrey C. Alexander, 1987-01-01 The work of fifteen nationally and internationally known theorists in sociology this volume demonstrates an exciting new trend in sociological thinking Each essay proposes a link between the two distinguishable traditions of sociological theory the microscopic which stresses the self and the interaction among persons and the macroscopic which concentrates on the institutional cultural and societal levels Each mode of analysis has had its champions and the proponents of each have often taken positions of polemic opposition to one another

From Dialogue to Epilogue Marxism and Catholicism Tomorrow Frederick J. Adelman, 2012-12-06 This is an authentic book Its style fits its situation The encounter between Marxism and Catholicism was yesterday diatribe is today dialogue and tomorrow will be epilogue The virtue of Father Adelman's writing is to make us aware that we are in via Happenings are everywhere not just in hippieland In Salzburg and South Bend in Chiemsee and Cambridge conversations are going on conversations that are no less than confessions For Catholics and Marxists are listening to each other and are changing their minds It has been the peculiar good fortune of the author of this book to have been both recorder and participant in these changes He has experienced the transition from diatribe to dialogue in his own thoughts and feelings and he has here written not an outsider's account but an insider's recounting He is not simply this volume's author but also one of its case of characters Hence the style of his writing is apperceptively autobiographical It fits the situation He is a character in a play who is also that drama's author His essay then is not simply a discussion of the relation between Catholicism and Marxism today but is a contribution to ward a new relation between them and tomorrow

Praxis and Action Richard J. Bernstein, 2011-06-03 From the Introduction This inquiry is concerned with the themes of praxis and action in four philosophic movements Marxism existentialism pragmatism and analytic philosophy It is rare that these four movements are considered in a single inquiry for there are profound differences of emphasis focus terminology and approach represented by these styles of thought Many philosophers believe that similarities among these movements are superficial and that a close examination of them will reveal only hopelessly unbridgeable cleavages While respecting the genuine fundamental differences of these movements this inquiry is undertaken in the spirit of showing that there are important common themes and motifs in what first appears to be a chaotic babble of voices I intend to show that the concern with man as an agent has been a primary focal point of each of these movements and further that each contributes something permanent and important to our understanding of the nature and context of human activity
