

Give Credit Where It's Due: A Basic Guide to Citing Sources

When writing a research paper or completing a presentation, information used from books, websites, videos, articles, etc., must give credit to the author.

There are two things that require a citation: direct quotes and paraphrased content.

A good rule of thumb: If the sentence or paragraph isn't your original idea, you must cite it!

In-text Citation

- As you write, whether quoting or paraphrasing, place a parenthetical citation afterwards. In parenthetical citations, include the author's last name, the year (and page number for books). This is called an in-text citation.
- When using a parenthetical citation, the period is placed after the close parentheses.

In-text Citation Examples

Book: (L'Engle, 1963, p. 67)

Website: (Christensen, 2016)

Website without author: (English Oxford Living Dictionaries, 2017)

References

- At the end of your report, you will complete a References section. In this section, you will write out the full information for each source.
- Books: include the author's last name and initials, year, title of book, publisher, city, and state (or province).
- Websites: Include the author's last name and initials (or website name), year, title of article, and a link to the website.

Reference Examples

Book:

L'Engle, M. 1963. A Wrinkle in Time. Farrar, Straus & Giroux. New York, NY.

Website:

Christensen, M. 2016. How to Make Dill Pickles. <http://www.thekitchn.com/how-to-make-dill-pickles-cooking-lessons-from-the-kitchen-193350>

Website without author:

English Oxford Living Dictionaries. 2017. Source.
<https://en.oxforddictionaries.com/definition/source>

Additional Notes for References

- When references are more than one line, indent the second and all following lines.
- Place a period after each piece of information (except website links).
- Remove hyperlink from website links.
- If you cannot find the date on an article, simply put "n.d." This is short for "no date."
