Pastoralism and Climate Change in East Africa provides systematic and robust empirical investigations on the impact of climate change on pastoral production systems as well as participating in the ongoing debate over the efficacy of traditional pastoralism. This book is an initial product of the Project Building Knowledge to Support Climate Change Adaptation for Pastoralist Communities in East Africa implemented by the Centre for Climate Change Studies of the University of Dar es Salaam with support from the Open Society Initiative for Eastern Africa. Traditional pastoralism has proved to be a resilient and unique system of adaptations in a dynamic process of unpredictable climatic variability and continuous human interactions with the natural environment in dryland ecosystems. Pastoral adaptations and climate induced innovative coping mechanisms have strategically been embedded in the indigenous social structures and resource management value systems. Pastoral livelihoods have nevertheless become increasingly vulnerable to climate change impacts as a result of prolonged marginalization and harmful external interventions. The negative effect of global climate change has been an added dimension to the already prevailing crisis in the pastoral livelihood system which is substantially driven by non climatic factors of internal and external pressures of change such as population growth, bad governance and shrinking rangelands lost to competing activities. The IUCN Sahel Studies 1989 International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources, 1989

Resource Management and Pastoral Institution Building in the West African Sahel Nadarajah Shanmugaratnam, 1992. This discussion paper presents the results of a study on pastoral institution building and resource management in the West Africa Sahel. The study was part of a program of research into the future directions of livestock production, agricultural development and resource management in sub Saharan Africa. The study describes the experiences and lessons that have emerged from the implementation of on going projects assisted by the World Bank designed to develop pastoral associations in Mali, Mauritania, Niger and Senegal. The findings indicate that the formation and operation of pastoral associations must still be regarded as a pilot development activity although valuable lessons and recommendations can be deduced even at this early stage. The challenge is now to incorporate these lessons and recommendations in the design of future projects that aim to establish viable sustainable pastoral institutions and resource management activities.

Managing Wildlife in a Changing World Jafari R. Kideghesho, 2021-12-08. The declining trends of wildlife habitats and species populations are obvious consequences of the socio economic, political, ecological and technological changes occurring globally. Along with human population growth, there is a growing wave of wildlife diseases, invasive alien species, human wildlife conflicts, climate change, poaching, infrastructure development and economic options that are ecologically damaging. These changes have implications on the management of wildlife resources. Managing Wildlife in a Changing World draws experiences from different parts of the world on status, challenges and efforts of reversing the current negative trends on wildlife habitats and species in the face of these changes. This book is useful for academicians, researchers, policy makers, conservation practitioners, students and other interested readers.
