Community Organizing and Community Building for Health and Welfare Meredith Minkler, 2012-07-16 The third edition of Community Organizing and Community Building for Health and Welfare provides new and more established ways to approach community building and organizing from collaborating with communities on assessment and issue selection to using the power of coalition building media advocacy and social media to enhance the effectiveness of such work With a strong emphasis on cultural relevance and humility this collection offers a wealth of case studies in areas ranging from childhood obesity to immigrant worker rights to health care reform A tool kit of appendixes includes guidelines for assessing coalition effectiveness exercises for critical reflection on our own power and privilege and training tools such as policy bingo From former organizer and now President Barack Obama to academics and professionals in the fields of public health social work urban planning and community psychology the book offers a comprehensive vision and on the ground examples of the many ways community building and organizing can help us address some of the most intractable health and social problems of our times Dr Minkler s course syllabus Although Dr Minkler has changed the order of some chapters in the syllabus to accommodate guest speakers and help students prep for the midterm assignment she uses she arranged the actual book layout in a way that should flow quite naturally if instructors wish to use it in the order in which chapters appear We Are the Ones We Have Been Waiting For Peter Levine, 2015 In September 2011 two leading civic engagement advocacy organizations headed respectively by Robert Putnam and Peter Levine released a joint report showing that a region s level of civic engagement was a strong predictor of its ability to recover from the Great Recession This finding confirms what advocates of civic engagement have long hypothesized that strengthening the networks between government and civil society and increasing citizen participation results in better government and better community outcomes However citizens concerned about the economic crisis need more than just deliberation or community organizing alone to achieve these outcomes What they need according to Peter Levine is a movement devoted to civic renewal Deliberative democracy the idea that true democratic legitimacy derives from open inclusive discussion and dialogue rather than simple voting has become an extremely influential concept in the last two decades In We Are the Ones We Have Been Waiting For Peter Levine contends that effective deliberative democracy depends upon effective community advocacy Deliberation he shows is most valuable when talk and debate are integrated into a community s everyday life To illustrate how it works Levine draws lessons from both community organizing and developmental psychology and uses examples of successful efforts from communities across America as well as fledgling democracies in Africa and Eastern Europe By engaging in this type of civic work American citizens can meaningfully contribute to civic renewal which in turn will address serious social problems that cannot be fixed in any other way On Secular Governance Ronald W. Democracy as Problem Solving Xavier De Souza Briggs, 2008-07-18 Case studies from around the world and theoretical discussion show how the capacity to act collectively on local problems can be developed strengthening democracy while changing social and economic outcomes Complexity division mistrust and process paralysis can thwart leaders and others when they tackle local challenges In Democracy as Problem Solving Xavier de Souza Briggs shows how civic capacity the capacity to create and sustain smart collective action can be developed and used In an era of sharp debate over the conditions under which democracy can develop while broadening participation and building community Briggs argues that understanding and building civic capacity is crucial for strengthening governance and changing the state of the world in the process More than managing a contest among interest groups or spurring deliberation to reframe issues democracy can be what the public most desires a recipe for significant progress on important problems Briggs examines efforts in six cities in the United States Brazil India and South Africa that face the millennial challenges of rapid urban growth economic restructuring and investing in the next generation These challenges demand the engagement of government business and nongovernmental sectors And the keys to progress include the ability to combine learning and bargaining continuously forge multiple forms of accountability and find ways to leverage the capacity of the grassroots and what Briggs terms the grasstops regardless of who initiates change or who participates over time Civic capacity Briggs shows can and must be developed even in places that lack traditions of cooperative civic action

Lutheran Identity and Political Theology Carl-Henric Grenholm, Goran Gunner, 2014-11-04 Lutheran tradition has in various ways influenced attitudes to work the economy the state education and health care One reason that Lutheran theology has been interpreted in various ways is that it is always influenced by surrounding social and cultural contexts In a society where the church has lost a great deal of its cultural impact and authority and where there is a plurality of religious convictions the question of Lutheran identity has never been more urgent However this question is also raised in the Global South where Lutheran churches need to find their identity in a relationship with several other religions Here this relationship is developed from a minority perspective Is it possible to develop a Lutheran political theology that gives adequate contributions to issues concerning social and economic justice What is the role of women in church and society around the world Is it possible to interpret Lutheran theology in such a way that it includes liberating perspectives These are some of the questions and issues discussed in this book

Willful Defiance Mark R. Warren, 2022 The story of how Black and Brown parents students and members of low income communities of color organized to dismantle the school to prison pipeline in their local schools and built a movement that spread across the country In Willful Defiance Mark R Warren documents how Black and Brown parents students and low income communities of color organized to dismantle the school to prison pipeline in their local schools and built an intersectional movement that spread across the country Examining organizing processes in Mississippi Los Angeles Chicago and other localities he shows how relatively small groups of community members built the power to win policy changes to reduce suspensions and expulsions by combining deep local organizing with resources from the national movement As a result over the course of twenty years the movement to combat the school to prison pipeline resulted in falling suspension rates across the country and began to make gains in reducing police presence in schools especially in places where there have been sustained organizing and advocacy efforts In documenting the struggle organizers waged to build national alliances led by community groups and people most impacted by injustice rather than Washington based professional advocates Warren offers a new model for movements that operate simultaneously at local state and national levels while primarily oriented to support and spread local organizing In doing so he argues for the need to rethink national social justice movements as interconnected local struggles whose victories are lifted and spread In the end the book highlights lessons from the school to prison pipeline movement for organizers educators policymakers and a broader public seeking to transform deep seated and systemic racism in public schools and the broader society

Organizing for Educational Justice Michael Fabricant, 2010 Since the 1980s strategies for improving public education in America have focused on either competition through voucher programs and charter schools or standardization as enacted into federal law through No Child Left Behind These reforms however have failed to narrow the performance gap between poor urban students and other children In response parents have begun to organize local campaigns to strengthen the public schools in their communities One of the most original successful and influential of these parent led campaigns has been the Community Collaborative to Improve District 9 CC9 a consortium of six neighborhood based groups in the Bronx In Organizing for Educational Justice Michael B Fabricant tells the story of CC9 from its origins in 1995 as a small group of concerned parents to the citywide application of its reform agenda concentrating on targeted investment in the development of teacher capacity ten years later Drawing on in depth interviews with participants analysis of qualitative data and access to meetings and archives Fabricant evaluates CC9 s innovative approach to organizing and collaboration with other stakeholders including the United Federation of Teachers the NYC Department of Education neighborhood nonprofits and city colleges and universities Situating this case within a wider exploration of parent participation in educational reform Fabricant explains why CC9 succeeded and other parent led movements did not He also examines the ways in which the movement effectively empowered parents by rigorously ensuring a democratic process in making decisions and more broadly an inclusive organizational culture As urban parents across America search for ways to hold public schools accountable for their failures this book shows how the success of the CC9 experience can be replicated elsewhere around the country Learning from the Federal Market?Based Reforms William J. Mathis,Tina M. Trujillo,2016-06-01 Over the past twenty years educational policy has been characterized by top down market focused policies combined with a push toward privatization and school choice The new Every Student Succeeds Act continues along this path though with decision making authority now shifted toward the states These market based reforms have often been touted as the most promising response to the challenges of poverty and educational disenfranchisement But has this approach been successful Has learning improved Have historically low scoring schools turned around or have the reforms had little effect Have these narrow conceptions of schooling harmed the civic and social purposes of education in a democracy This book presents the evidence Drawing on the work of the nation s most prominent researchers the book explores the major elements of these reforms as well as the social political and educational contexts in which they take place It examines the evidence supporting the most common school improvement strategies school choice reconstitutions or massive personnel changes and school closures From there it presents the research findings cutting across these strategies by addressing the evidence on test score trends teacher evaluation miracle schools the Common Core State Standards school choice the newly emerging school improvement industry and re segregation among others The weight of the evidence indisputably shows little success and no promise for these reforms Thus the authors counsel strongly against continuing these failed policies The book concludes with a review of more promising avenues for educational reform including the necessity of broader societal investments for combatting poverty and adverse social conditions While schools cannot single handedly overcome societal inequalities important work can take place within the public school system with evidence based interventions such as early childhood education detracking adequate funding and full service community schools all intended to renew our nation s commitment to democracy and equal educational opportunity The SAGE Handbook of Educational Leadership Fenwick W.
