The Architecture of America's Stonehenge Mary E. Gage, 2021-06-01 The main complex of the America s Stonehenge site in New Hampshire is a collection of stone chambers enclosures niches standing stones carved drains basins and astronomical alignments The archaeological community has largely dismissed this seemly eclectic collection of structures as the work of an eccentric farmer named Jonathan Pattee who built his house on top of the ruins in the 19th century Other researchers have sought to compare the chambers and astronomical alignments to stone structures from around the world built by other ancient peoples No one has thought to evaluate the site on its own merits specifically evaluating its architecture Architecture can tell you a lot about a culture Using this approach the author unravels the mystery surrounding the site This architectural study revealed the site was built in a series of distinct phases each with its own unique style while at the same time incorporating key concepts and ideas from previous phases There is a clear evolution of building skills and cultural ideas that can be followed through the architectural build out of the site Because key features and ideas were carried forward from one phase to the next we now know that the site was the work of a single culture over a several thousand year period Stone tools and pottery recovered from archaeological excavations at the site confirm that the builders were Native Americans The idea of Native Americans building stone structures for ceremonial and spiritual purposes has gained a lot of credibility over the past twenty five years There is mounting evidence that hundreds of ceremonial stone landscapes CSL with stone cairns niches enclosures standings stones chambers and astronomical alignments found throughout northeastern United States are part of a broad based Native American cultural tradition The America s Stonehenge site is one of the most sophisticated and culturally complex of these sacred ceremonial places The second part of this book uses primary source materials like deeds town records court cases and genealogy to reconstruct the history of the Pattee family who owned the hill where the site is found from 1739 through 1863 The Pattees started out in the 1700s as a prosperous family with a house in North Salem village and a 248 acre farm By the 1820s the third generation was reduced to owning 15 acres of the original farm and living in a small house built on top of the ruins of the site Despite his many financial misfortunes Jonathan Pattee third generation managed to hold on to and protect the site

A Spring-time Case: Otsuya Koroshi Jun'ichiro Tanizaki, The scenes of the present story are laid in the town of Tokyo which in those days was still known as Yeddo a name to day seldom mentioned save in connection with that period of some two hundred years leading close up to the dawn of the Modern Age of Japan generally known as the Restoration when the fine arts and literature of the country with their centre at Yeddo reached a state of splendid activity with few parallels in the history of the country It were not going too far in fact to say that the name of Yeddo to day conjures up a period of peace with the whole nation glorying in a free and full enjoyment of life following the dictates of their own hearts and minds in a complete deliverance of spirit from the black reign of the War God The nation which had returned to peace some eighty years since and claimed the rightful heritage of life which had been denied them under war like conditions prevailing throughout a period of some three hundred years had by this time developed a civilization quite unique for its romantic fervour Not a civilization to be considered in terms of steam whistles and bicycles to be sure but a state of artistic emancipation where the soul of man was honoured and the aspirations of mind exalted Under the administration of the Shogun Government the country fared well and even waxed rich in so far as the welfare of the people was concerned The piper piped the people danced The blade hitherto kept whetted sharp was now allowed to rest rusting in its sheath The hand hardened in war like training had now turned to the plough or to the brush and the chisel Art grew rich and literature advanced In the age of the Genroku the new spirit of the country had reached a state of ripened mellowness its name carries to this day visions of vivid colours and brilliant freedom It is back to those times of the Yeddo period deep into the life of that age that Tanizaki takes us in his present story If he has treated the subject with a modern touch in some aspects his canvas is nevertheless done true to the tradition which masters of the age have left in their supreme understanding of colour and line Tanizaki consistently displays himself an unerring judge of the tools at his service and is ever sure of the effect to be attained His colours are striking if often bold his lines always forceful because simple The story concerns a great deal with one particular side of Japanese life as it existed in those days of old and even continues to this day with but slight changes in certain aspects It is just the side where the impassive mask of the Japanese stoic is thrust aside in a true enjoyment of life where the best and sweetest in the Japanese woman is brought forth for the benefit of man It is a world of the geisha which is generally translated as singing girls an epithet so misleading because whatever vocal talent they may be called upon to display is given not on the stage or in the public as it suggests but is given for the entertainment of men who have elected to confine themselves in their private company Not a community where licensed vice is trafficked but an institution where the woman s artistic attainments and wits no less than her personality are thrown in direct touch with men within encompassed society a system born out of a moral notion that disfavoured open association between men and women

Gage,2006 For the ancient Native Peoples the place known to us as America s Stonehenge Mystery Hill was a sacred place For 2500 years they came annually to hold ceremonies with the spirits At first they came on the summer solstice and then later they came for the winter solstice and spring equinox They built ritual structures like stone chambers cairns drains basins enclosures and standing stones as part of their ceremonial areas As the ceremonies were altered and added to new ceremonial structures were built to accommodate them These structures were constructed for specific purposes contained symbolism meaningful to their culture and had distinct architectural styles The result is an amazing archaeological record of the 2500 year cultural history of this sacred place Americai s Stonehenge

Deciphered explores the purpose of these structures the ceremonies held at them and the meaning behind the symbolism built into them It traces how these cultural beliefs were passed from generation to generation and how they were added to and altered to meet the changing needs of their culture What emerges from this is a profound respect for the intelligence sophistication and the depth of their spiritual worldview culture and their expertise with building stone structures
