

Canadian Trade Patterns

- Most years, the Canadian economy generates a favourable balance of merchandise trade
- However, Canada's non-merchandise trade typically generates a negative balance
 - Driven by interest and dividend payments made to foreign investors, this deficit has been increasing steadily in recent years
 - The Canadian economy is extremely dependent on foreign capital to support domestic industrial activity and to carry the large public/government debt
 - In 2000, export of travel, transportation, commercial, government, and financial service totaled $58 billion while imports of these services totaled $64 billion

Trading on Their Terms? Commodity Exporters in the Aftermath of the Commodity Boom Aqib Aslam, Samya Beidas-Strom, Mr. Rudolfs Bems, Oya Celasun, Sinem Kiliç Çelik, Zsoka Koczan, 2016-02-15 Commodity prices have declined sharply over the past three years and output growth has slowed considerably among countries that are net exporters of commodities A critical question for policy makers in these economies is whether commodity windfalls influence potential output Our analysis suggests that both actual and potential output move together with commodity terms of trade but that actual output comoves twice as strongly as potential output The weak commodity price outlook is estimated to subtract 1 to 2.14 percentage points from actual output growth annually on average during 2015-17 The forecast drag on potential output is about one third of that for actual output Canada International Monetary Fund. Western Hemisphere Dept., 2014-02-03 This 2013 Article IV Consultation highlights that the Canadian economy strengthened in 2013 after a subdued performance in 2012 but the underlying growth has remained modest Despite the depreciating exchange rate non energy exports remained well below the levels reached after earlier recessions The housing market has cooled owing in part to macro prudential measures adopted in the past Economic growth is expected to accelerate to 2.14 percent in 2014 up from an estimated 1.34 percent in 2013 Canada's export growth should benefit from the projected pick up in U.S. growth in 2014 boosting business investment The Spillover Effects of a Downturn in China's Real Estate Investment Mr. Ashvin Ahuja, Mr. Alla Myrvoda, 2012-11-05 Real estate investment accounts for a quarter of total fixed asset investment FAI in China The real estate sector's extensive industrial and financial linkages make it a special type of economic activity especially where the credit creation process relies primarily on collateral like in China As a result the impact on economic activity of a collapse in real estate investment in China though a low probability event would be sizable with large spillovers to a number of China's trading partners Using a two region factor augmented vector autoregression model that allows for interaction between China and the rest of the G20 economies we find that a 1 percent decline in China's real estate investment would shave about 0.1 percent off China's real GDP within the first year with negative spillover impacts to China's G20 trading partners that would cause global output to decline by roughly 0.05 percent from baseline Japan Korea and Germany would be among the hardest hit In that event commodity prices especially metal prices could fall by as much as 0.822 percent below baseline one year after the shock Canada International Monetary Fund, 2011-12-21 The Canadian monetary and fiscal policies have remained accommodative reflecting in large measure the effective response to the crisis Canada is expected to set the appropriate policy mix in the future at a time of high uncertainty and significant external headwinds Given the advanced stage of the recovery a still large budget deficit and the need to address long term fiscal challenges fiscal policy has moved toward a tightening stance Resilient household credit has helped sustain private consumption and the construction sector during the crisis OECD Economic Surveys: Canada 2014 OECD, 2014-06-11 OECD's 2014 Economic global risks external conditions for Latin America should remain stimulative With monetary policy in advanced economies expected to stay accommodative external financing conditions will remain favorable Strong demand from emerging Asian economies and the gradual recovery of advanced economies will continue to support commodity prices benefiting exporters The main policy challenge for most of the region is to take advantage of current conditions to continue buttressing a foundation for sustained growth Other issues important to the region include i strengthening balance sheets ii understanding how changes in external conditions could impact public and external debt dynamics and iii making the best use of the windfall from the recent terms of trade boom ERS Staff Report ,1986 Edward P.
