Abstract: Through citizen participation in public decision-making, the real needs of the community are and should be included in decisions that cover those needs and are thus publicly supported. From such a direction, this micro-research aims to examine the concrete situation regarding the participation of citizens in the decision-making process by interpreting the perceptions of residents and local public administration staff in Dărmănești commune, to highlight the effectiveness of citizen participation in adopting an administrative decision. The approach showed that both the majority of workers in the city hall and most of the locals in the commune, who provided us with answers in the survey, appreciate that the involvement of citizens in the public decision-making process is key to democracy. Most of both respondents categories states that the main arguments for consulting the public in the process of making a public decision are: the right of citizens, ensuring the effective adoption and implementation of decisions, the decisions taken are accepted/supported by society, promoting the transparency of the decision-making process. Expressing own choice, submitting requests to the local public administration, submitting written suggestions, informal discussions tend to be considered by both the surveyed staff and the responding residents as effective and very effective ways. On the other hand, we have found that opinion polls are one of the least effective ways for citizens to participate, with most opinions, in the case of both categories of respondents, being recorded for the small and very small response varieties.

Keywords: public decision-making process; local public administration; human resources; town hall institution; residents; arguments for consultation; ways to participate; effectiveness.

Citizen Participation In Public Decision Making:

Citizen Engagement and Its Impact on Public Policy Formation V. Basil Hans, 2025-02-09 In today's rapidly evolving world the role of citizens in shaping public policy has become more critical than ever. As governments strive to be more transparent, inclusive, and responsive, citizen engagement serves as a fundamental pillar in fostering democratic governance. This book, Citizen Engagement and Its Impact on Public Policy Formation, explores the dynamics of public participation, the mechanisms through which citizens influence policy decisions, and the broader implications of engagement on governance and societal development. This work aims to bridge the gap between theory and practice by examining real-world case studies, best practices, and challenges in citizen participation. It delves into how digital platforms, grassroots movements, and institutional reforms have transformed traditional policymaking processes, allowing for a more participatory and collaborative approach. The book is structured to provide a comprehensive understanding of the subject. The initial chapters establish the theoretical foundations of citizen engagement, followed by an exploration of contemporary models and strategies employed worldwide. Subsequent sections analyse the effectiveness of citizen participation in various policy domains, including environmental policies, urban planning, and social welfare. Finally, the book offers insights into the future of citizen engagement, highlighting emerging trends and technological advancements that are reshaping the policy landscape. By shedding light on these critical aspects, this book seeks to inspire scholars, policymakers, civil society organizations, and engaged citizens to recognize the value of participatory governance. It is our hope that this work will contribute to ongoing discussions on strengthening democratic institutions and fostering meaningful public involvement in decision-making processes. I extend my gratitude to all researchers and policymakers whose insights and experiences have enriched this book. Their dedication to understanding and enhancing citizen engagement has been instrumental in shaping this study. I am grateful to Deep Science Publishing for the smooth journey in publishing this book.

Citizen Participation in Public Decision Making Jack DeSario, Stuart Langton, Policy Studies Organization, 1987-01-13 As services provided by government have expanded over the past several decades, so inevitably has bureaucracy, especially the corps of professional administrators in charge of programs ranging from health care to the maintenance of efficient transportation networks. Under pressure from reform groups to promote public accountability by involving citizens in the decision-making process, government has begun to place private citizens on many important health, education, transportation, and environmental planning bodies. This study of citizen participation and technocracy, written by twelve prominent specialists, provides the first comprehensive theoretical and empirical analyses of these recent developments and their impact on formulating, directing, and implementing public policies.
