Hippokratis Kiaris, 2022 Civilizations can be perceived as living human beings that are born mature age and ultimately die and disappear passing their legacy to the future generations These transitions may be projected to the different stages of cognitive development of children The Western Civilization which embodies our current state of cultural advancement from the Classic Greek to the modern period can be paralleled by the gradual transitions of human beings toward adulthood From this perspective the ancient Greek era resembles the toddler years of humanity at which the first why type questions are being asked The theocratic period that followed until the Renaissance can be seen as our childhood when people lived their lives under the tight boundaries set by religious authorities The period spanning from the Enlightenment until almost the end of the 20th century can be considered as our teenage years when people rediscover their past are liberated from superstition and set the path forward based on reason by a manner at which the distinction between plausible and feasible is vague Within this scheme postmodernism also finds its place in our teenhood The last few decades from this perspective signify our entrance to adulthood at which major questions are considered answered or at least settled and the only path forward perceived as feasible is the one that is followed already a state that is bringing us closer to our intellectual aging and its inevitable death Some signs of aging related pathologies are already manifested in today's technology intensive society By identifying our intellectual age and by appreciating our health status we may be able to proactively delay or even avert our intellectual aging and death Performing Action Joseph R. Gusfield, 2017-09-08 In recent years the social sciences and the humanities have drawn closer to each other in thought and method This rapprochement has led to new perceptions of human behavior by sociologists as well as new methodological orientations Sociologist Joseph R Gusfield draws upon drama and fiction to show how human action is shaped by the formal dimensions of performance Gusfield first defines the concept of behavior as artistic performance He then analyzes routine and classic social research reports as literary performances in qualitative and quantitative terms Next he moves to social movements and public actions demonstrating how objects and events are products of the interpretation and reflection of individuals He draws upon literary and artistic conventions to deal with issues of representation and meaning In the first and last chapters Gusfield provides a conceptual summary examining the relation between sociology as science and art arguing that sociological methods are neither science nor art but partake of both Following the philosopher Paul Ricoeur Gusfield shows how human behavior can be read as a text always telling the participant or observer something about something Performing Action will be of interest to sociologists psychologists and students of aesthetics and critical theory Candida Betsy Russell-Manning, 1985 "Civilized" Diseases and Their Circumvention Max Otto Garten, 1978 The Publishers' Trade List Annual , 1985
