City Building on the Eastern Frontier Diane Shaw, 2020-03-03 America's westward expansion involved more than pushing the frontier across the Mississippi toward the Pacific it also consisted of urbanizing undeveloped regions of the colonial states In 1810 New York's future governor DeWitt Clinton marveled that the rage for erecting villages is a perfect mania The development of Rochester and Syracuse illuminates the national experience of internal economic and cultural colonization during the first half of the nineteenth century Architectural historian Diane Shaw examines the ways in which these new cities were shaped by a variety of constituents founders merchants politicians and settlers as opportunities to extend the commercial and social benefits of the market economy and a merchant culture to America's interior At the same time she analyzes how these priorities resulted in a new approach to urban planning According to Shaw city founders and residents deliberately arranged urban space into three segmented districts commercial industrial and civic to promote a self fulfilling vision of a profitable and urbane city Shaw uncovers a distinctly new model of urbanization that challenges previous paradigms of the physical and social construction of nineteenth century cities Within two generations the new cities of Rochester and Syracuse were sorted at multiple scales including not only the functional definition of districts but also the refinement of building types and styles the stratification of building interiors by floor and even the coding of public space by class gender and race Shaw's groundbreaking model of early nineteenth century urban design and spatial culture is a major contribution to the interdisciplinary study of the American city have led to the gentrification of nightlife while infringing on urban inhabitants rights of access to spaces of diverse urban subcultures their right to the city The author also connects these struggles to the widely documented phenomenon of the increasing militarization of social life and space in contemporary cities and the right to the city movements that have emerged in response The story presented here involves dynamic and often contradictory interactions between different anti pro nightlife actors illustrating what actually existing gentrification and post industrialization looks like and providing an urgent example for experts in related fields to consider as part of a re theorization of gentrification and post industrialization
