Modern American Poetry and the Architectural Imagination. Jo Gill, 2023. Modern American Poetry and the Architectural Imagination: The Harmony of Forms assesses the relationship between architectural and poetic innovation in the United States across the twentieth century. Taking the work of five key poets as case studies and drawing on the work of a rich range of other writers, architects, artists, and commentators, this study proposes that by examining the sustained and productive if hitherto overlooked engagement between the two disciplines, we enrich our understanding of the complexity and interrelationship of both. The book begins by tracing the rise of what was conceived of as modern and often international style architecture and by showing how poetry and architecture in the early decades of the century developed in dialogue and within a shared and often transnational context. It then moves on to examine the material, aesthetic, and social conditions that helped shape both disciplines, offering new readings of familiar poems and bringing other pertinent resources to light. It considers the uses to which poets of the period put the insights of architecture and vice versa. In closing, Gill turns to modern and contemporary architects' written accounts of their own practice in memoirs and other commentaries and examines how they have assimilated or resisted the practice and vision of poetry.

Catholic School Renaissance. Andy Smarick, Kelly Robson, 2015-11-01. Over the last generation, Catholic schools have been buffeted by a confluence of winds: changing demographics in the urban neighborhoods where many of their facilities are located; the disappearance of nuns and priests from classrooms; new competition from tuition-free charter schools. Finances crumbled, enrollments fell, and 6,000 schools were closed. Yet two million children remain in Catholic schools today. This includes a great many low-income and minority youngsters for whom Catholic schooling is a lifeline in an otherwise dysfunctional neighborhood. And Catholic schools get enormous bang for their educational buck: posting graduation rates, college success patterns, and levels of constructive student behavior that much exceed the performance at counterpart public institutions. Donors never gave up on Catholic schools And in recent years they have begun to be rewarded for their loyalty The last decade has brought a burst of fresh management structures teacher pipelines back office mechanisms helpful technologies support groups education reform allies private investors and state and local school choice programs that leave Catholic schools in their best position for future success in more than 50 years It is now possible to see the outlines of a significant Catholic school renaissance And it is donors who are leading the way This practical guide describes hundreds of opportunities for savvy givers to put a stamp on this field where there may be more opportunities for life changing philanthropy than in any other corner of our nation
