

15 Barriers to Effective Communication

S. M. Ikhtiar Alam<sup>1</sup>

1. Wrong/inappropriate language: Right language at the right level is required for the receiver to decode correctly to get the intended message. All words must be culturally acceptable.
2. Wrong Channel: A channel may be wrong for various reasons. One reason is that the receiver is not familiar with the channel used; such as an e-mail message.
3. Wrong Encoding: If the sender fails to correctly encode the intended message, the receiver will not receive the intended message.
4. Competing Messages: For various reasons, two or more senders send messages to the receiver at the same time. These messages may become, at least, partly competing with one another in their very meaning (or even objectives). So the receiver cannot receive only a single message, rather, the receiver receives many competing messages. The receiver will give more emphasis on the more compelling messages (logically and factually which is believable with a note of signal regarding competing messages) which, in fact, may be totally meaningless or irrelevant.
5. Channel Breakdowns: Sometimes the channel simply breaks down and fails to deliver the messaged at all. Channel breakdown implies many different things. A colleague you were counting on to deliver a message to your boss
