Sustainable Work Ability and Aging Clas-Håkan Nygård, 2020-02-13 In many industrialized countries there is a sharp increase of the aging population due to a decrease in fertility rate and an increase in life expectancy Due to which the age dependency ratio rises and may cause increased economic burden among working age population One strategy to combat this problem is to prolong peoples working career A sufficient work ability is a requirement for a sustainable and prolonged employment Work ability is primarily a question of balance between work and personal resources Personal resources change with age whereas work demands may not change parallel to that or only change due to globalization or new technology Work ability on average decreases with age although several different work ability pathways exist during the life course Work related factors as well as general lifestyle may explain the declines and improvements in work ability during aging A sustainable work ability throughout the life course is a main incentive for a prolonged working career and a healthy aging Work ability and work related factors are therefore important occupational and public health issues when the age of the population increases This Special Issue Sustainable Work Ability and Aging includes in all 16 original articles and one opinion paper organized in three sections The research topics cover wide aspects of work ability from determinants older employee s coping with their work methodological issues as well as results of interventions on promoting work ability Active Ageing Andrea Principi, Per H. Jensen, Giovanni Lamura, 2014-05-14 Active ageing has become a key phrase in discourses about challenges and remedies for demographic ageing and the enrolment of older adults into voluntary work is an important dimension of it The pattern and factors conditioning volunteering among older people has so far been an under researched topic in Europe and this is the first book to study volunteering among older people comparatively and comprehensively In this topical book older people s volunteering is studied in eight European countries at the structural macro meso and micro levels Overall it highlights how different interactions between the levels facilitate or hinder older people s inclusion in voluntary work and makes policy suggestions for an integrated strategy This book provides important new insights for academics and students interested in ageing societies active ageing and voluntary work It will also be of great value for policy makers and practitioners in third sector and voluntary organisations
