Duchan,2013-06-17 Competence and incompetence are constructs that emerge in the social milieu of everyday life Individuals are continually making and revising judgments about each other's abilities as they interact. The flexible situated view of competence conveyed by the research of the authors in this volume is a departure from the way that competence is usually thought about in the fields of communication disabilities and education. In the social constructivist view, competence is not a fixed mass residing within an individual or a fixed judgment defined externally. Rather, it is variable, sensitive to what is going on in the here and now, and coconstructed by those present. Constructions of competence are tied to evaluations implicit in the communication of the participants as well as to explicit evaluations of how things are going. The authors address the social construction of competence in a variety of situations: engaging in therapy for communication and other disorders; working and living with people with disabilities; speaking a second language; living with deafness; and giving and receiving instruction. Their studies focus on adults and children, including those with disabilities: aphasia, traumatic brain injury, augmentative systems users, as they go about managing their lives and identities. They examine the all-important context in which participants make competence judgments, assess the impact of implicit judgments and formal diagnoses, and look at the types of evaluations made during interaction. This book makes an argument all helping professionals need to hear: institutional, clinical, and social practices promoting judgments must be changed to practices that are more positive and empowering.

Anti-Racist School Leadership Jeffrey S. Brooks, Noelle Witherspoon-Arnold, 2013-03-01 Since the passing of Brown versus Board of Education to the election of the first Black president of the United States, there has been much discussion on how far we have come as a nation on issues of race. Some continue to assert that Barack Obama's election ushered in a new era, making the US a post-racial society. But this argument is either a political contrivance borne of ignorance or a bold-faced lie. There is no recent data on school inequities or inequity in society for that matter that suggests we have arrived at Dr. King's dream that his four children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character. Children today are instead still judged by the color of their skin, and this inequitable practice is manifest in today's schools for students of color in the form of disproportionate student discipline referrals, achievement and opportunity gaps, pushout rates, overrepresentation in special education, and underrepresentation in advanced coursework among other indicators. Brooks 2012. Though issues of race in the public education system may take an overt or covert form, racial injustice in public schools is still pervasive, complex, and cumulative. For example, many students of color year after year do not have access to good teachers, experience low staff expectations, and are subject to new and improved forms of tracking. Brooks Arnold Brooks in press. The authors in this book explore various ways that racism is manifest in the American school system. Through a plurality of perspectives, they deconstruct, challenge, and reconstruct an educational leadership committed to equity and excellence for marginalized students and educators A Practitioner's Guide to Understanding Indigenous and Foreign Cultures George Henderson, Dorcine Spigner-Littles, Virginia Hall Milhouse, 2006 Young, Gifted, and Black Theresa Perry, Claude Steele, 2012-09-11 An important and powerful book that radically reframes the debates swirling around the academic achievement of African American students Boston Review The solutions offered by each essay are creative inspirational and good old common sense Los Angeles Times In 3 separate but allied essays African American scholars Theresa Perry Claude Steele and Asa Hilliard examine the alleged achievement gap between Black and white students Each author addresses how the unique social and cultural position Black students occupy in a society which often devalues and stereotypes African American identity fundamentally shapes students experience of school and sets up unique obstacles Young Gifted and Black provides an understanding of how these forces work opening the door to practical powerful methods for promoting high achievement at all levels In the first piece Theresa Perry argues that the dilemmas African American students face are rooted in the experience of race and ethnicity in America making the task of achievement distinctive and difficult Claude Steele follows up with stunningly clear empirical psychological evidence that when Black students believe they are being judged as members of a stereotyped group rather than as individuals they do worse on tests Finally Asa Hilliard argues against a variety of false theories and misguided views of African American achievement sharing examples of real schools programs and teachers around the country that allow African American students to achieve at high levels Now more than ever Young Gifted and Black is an eye opening work that has the power to not only change how we talk and think about African American student achievement but how we view the African American experience as a whole
