Science and Art Antonio Sgamellotti, Brunetto Giovanni Brunetti, Costanza Miliani, 2020-02-24 Science and art are increasingly interconnected in the activities of the study and conservation of works of art Science plays a key role in cultural heritage from developing new analytical techniques for studying the art to investigating new ways of preserving the materials for the future For example high resolution multispectral examination of paintings allows art historians to view underdrawings barely visible before while the use of non invasive and micro sampling analytical techniques allow scientists to identify pigments and binders that help art conservators in their work It also allows curators to understand more about how the artwork was originally painted Through a series of case studies written by scientists together with art historians archaeologists and conservators Science and Art The Painted Surface demonstrates how the cooperation between science and humanities can lead to an increased understanding of the history of art and to better techniques in conservation The examples used in the book cover paintings from ancient history Renaissance modern and contemporary art belonging to the artistic expressions of world regions from the Far East to America and Europe Topics covered include the study of polychrome surfaces from pre Columbian and medieval manuscripts the revelation of hidden images below the surface of Van Gogh paintings and conservation of acrylic paints in contemporary art Presented in an easily readable form for a large audience the book guides readers into new areas uncovered by the link between science and art The book features contributions from leading institutions across the globe including the Metropolitan Museum of Art New York Art Institute of Chicago Getty Conservation Institute Opificio delle Pietre Dure Firenze National Gallery of London Tate Britain Warsaw Academy of Fine Art and the National Gallery of Denmark as well as a chapter covering the Thangka paintings by Nobel Prize winner Richard Ernst
