Black Deception:

Searching for the New Black Man Ronda C. Henry Anthony, 2013-06-01 Using the slave narratives of Henry Bibb and Frederick Douglass as well as the work of W E B Du Bois James Baldwin Walter Mosley and Barack Obama Ronda C Henry Anthony examines how women's bodies are used in African American literature to fund the production of black masculine ideality and power In tracing representations of ideal black masculinities and femininities the author shows how black men's struggles for gendered agency are inextricably entwined with their complicated relation to white men and normative masculinity The historical context in which this study couches these struggles highlights the extent to which shifting socioeconomic circumstances dictate the ideological cultural and emotional terms upon which black men conceptualize identity Yet Anthony quickly moves to texts that challenge traditional constructions of black masculinity In these texts she traces how the emergence of collaboratively gendered discourses or a blending of black female male feminist consciousnesses are reshaping black masculinities femininities and intraracial relations for a new century

This book is written for all parents especially Chinese and Asian parents who come from a cultural background that holds education in the highest regard Many of us parents are willing to put in a lot of our time resources and energy to provide the best educational opportunities for our children in hopes that they will excel academically and be successful in life We may think we are making sacrifices but too often despite our good intentions we end up stressing out and hurting our children Loving our children means wanting the best for them and doing everything we can to help them attain their goals The problem is that we dont necessarily know what is best for our children or what their goals are What we think is best for them may not be their best and the goals we set for them may not be their goals To better understand our children we need to build a safe secure and trusting relationship with them so that they could communicate their needs and thoughts with us with ease and confidence Often times our children may not feel our love because they think we are treating them like projects that need to be improved With the pressure from parents peers schools society culture and the pressure from within themselves many of our children develop problems like aggression addiction anxiety anger depression low self worth poor grades sleep disorders eating disorders weight problems etc
