Birds By Night:

Birds by Night Graham Martin, 2010-09-30 For many people watching and studying birds is exclusively a day time activity However for many birds twilight and night time are not a barrier to useful activity It is true that very few birds are exclusively nocturnal but many birds which are active by day also conduct limited and often crucial activities after dusk This book examines many examples of the nocturnal behaviour of birds from the occasional night feeding of wildfowl and shorebirds to the night singing and night migration of certain passerines and from the location of nest sites by sea birds to the nocturnal foraging of owls and nightjars The special cases of flightless nocturnal birds and those birds which dwell in lightless caves are also considered Throughout this survey considers not only what it is that birds do at night but also discusses how these nocturnal activities are possible It brings together studies in field ornithology sensory science ecology and physics and involves comparisons of the sensory capacities of other animals including man It is shown how the senses of hearing smell and touch as well as vision play a crucial role in many of the night time activities of birds However these senses are not always adequate for fully explaining how nocturnal behaviours are executed To achieve this we must look at the complex of relationships between behavioural and sensory adaptations and the particular environments which birds inhabit from dusk to dawn Jacket paintings by John Busby
