A Bibliography of the Northern Territory: Sciences, primary industry and recreation, 1977 The Archaeology of Rock Art in Western Arnhem Land, Australia Bruno David, Paul Taçon, Jean-Jacques Delannoy, Jean-Michel Geneste, 2017-11-30

Western Arnhem Land in the Top End of Australia's Northern Territory has a rich archaeological landscape ethnographic record and body of rock art that displays an astonishing array of imagery on shelter walls and ceilings. While the archaeology goes back to the earliest period of Aboriginal occupation of the continent, the rock art represents some of the richest, most diverse and visually most impressive regional assemblages anywhere in the world. To better understand this multi-dimensional cultural record, The Archaeology of Rock Art in Western Arnhem Land, Australia focuses on the nature and antiquity of the region's rock art as revealed by archaeological surveys and excavations and the application of novel analytical methods. This volume also presents new findings by which to rethink how Aboriginal peoples have socially engaged in and with places across western Arnhem Land from the north to the south, from the plains to the spectacular rocky landscapes of the plateau. The dynamic nature of Arnhem Land rock art is explored and articulated in innovative ways that shed new light on the region's deep-time Aboriginal history.

Fire in Tropical Savannas Alan N. Andersen, Garry D. Cook, Richard J. Williams, 2006-05-17. Fire is a major agent of disturbance in many biomes of the world but is a particularly important feature of tropical savannas. Up to 50% of the extensive tropical savanna landscapes of northern Australia are burnt each year. This includes prestigious conservation reserves such as World Heritage listed Kakadu National Park in the Top End of the Northern Territory. As in other savanna regions of the world, the responses of biota to different fire regimes are poorly understood such that fire management represents one of the greatest challenges to conservation managers and researchers alike. This is the context within which a landscape-scale fire experiment was established at Kapalga Research Station in Kakadu which aimed to provide a sound scientific basis for conservation management in the region. The experiment was established by The Australian Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organization CSIRO but involved collaborators from a range of universities and government agencies including the managers of Kakadu, the Australian Nature Conservation Agency ANCA, now Parks Australia North. This book summarizes the findings from the Kapalga fire experiment and explores the implications for conservation management. We believe that Kapalga has provided important insights into the fire ecology of tropical savannas and has broad relevance for the conservation management of fire-prone landscapes in general. This book should be of interest to researchers, graduate students and land management agencies.

viii Preface We are extremely grateful to all our collaborators both inside and outside CSIRO for their involvement in the Kapalga experiment.
