

BREACH OF PROMISE TO MARRY

It is very commonsensical that in any case of breach that the question of whether there was contract in the first place must be asked. Once that is settled, then, the breach of it can be the bone of contention. This is to say, before a suit of breach of promise to marry can be successful, there must have been mutual assent between the two capacitated adults.

Hence, any person, male or female who can prove that their lover jilts them after promising to marry them is defaulted and are entitled to damages from defaulting party [lover].

Equity, Efficiency, and Ethics in Remedies for Breach of Contract Sergio Mittlaender, 2022-12-02 This book analyzes the conflict that emerges between parties after a breach of contract and how different legal remedies can best reduce conflict. Causes for conflict include equity, efficiency and ethical reasons that parties might consider and use to blame the other or to justify breach. In the end, if not resolved through apologies or renegotiation, conflict leads to aggrievement and behavioral reactions in form of retaliation by the victim against the promisor in breach. The book provides empirical evidence from laboratory experiments for how individuals react to perceived wrongful acts such as breach of contract and for the function of legal remedies to reduce retaliation by disappointed promisees in providing them compensation. It reveals how the inequality in the outcome and not the inefficiency of breach of contract causes aggrievement and retaliation by victims. The book concludes with a comparative law and economic analysis of remedies for breach of contract adopted in different leading jurisdictions with important normative implications for the American insistence on expectation damages, the French expansion of specific performance with astreinte, the German junction of specific performance, expectation damages and disgorgement damages, and the British timid acceptance of partial disgorgement damages. The book will appeal to scholars, researchers and students of economics and law interested in a better understanding of remedies for breach of contract.

The Enforceability of Promises in European Contract Law James Gordley, 2001-07-12. Civil law and common law systems are held to enforce promises differently: civil law in principle will enforce any promise while common law will enforce only those with consideration. In that respect, modern civil law supposedly differs from the Roman law from which it descended, where a promise was enforced depending on the type of contract the parties had made. This 2001 volume is concerned with the extent to which these characterizations are true and how these and other differences affect the enforceability of promises. Beginning with a concise history of these distinctions, the volume then considers how twelve European legal systems would deal with fifteen concrete situations. Finally, a comparative section considers why legal systems enforce certain promises and not others and what promises should be enforced. This is the second completed project of The Common Core of European Private Law launched at the University of Trento.

To which are added a few pages on the Law of Breach of Promise and a Glance at Many Amusing Cases Since the Reign of Queen Elizabeth. Our legislative physicians are in doubt as to the efficacy of their medicine and they differ but little in this respect from a few medical men perhaps of the reader's own acquaintance. The patient sufferers, the unfortunate public have also it is needless to add but little confidence in the beneficial results of the mixture. Experience shows that by taking the dose a part of the body is certainly benefited while the greater part is injured, sometimes beyond remedy. Hence it is that two subjects para mount in importance both dealing with the social welfare of our country are now among those upper most in the public mind. They affect all sorts and conditions of men. No marvel therefore that so much interest has during recent years attached to the Action of Breach of Promise of Marriage and to the question of Marriage.
